Loss Scenarios

Additions & Alterations (A&A Coverage)

- ★ A&A provides the insured with coverage not only for interior improvements made to a condominium unit, but also for the portions of the interior that are the insured's responsibility under the Master Deed.
- ★ Oftentimes the insured is responsible for "the studs in", meaning coverage is needed for damage or destruction to certain property like interior walls, ceilings, floors, electrical, plumbing and HVAC systems, as well as windows and exterior doors.
- ★ The challenge is to help insureds understand that a condominium policy is not simply a Contents form, but rather similar to a homeowners policy that covers everything except the shell of the house (roof and exterior surfaces).

The Dryer Fire

Mr. Smith lives in a historic townhouse in an upscale condominium development. On his way out, he put his laundry in the clothes dryer located in a built-in closet on the ground floor of his home. Within an hour, the dryer caught fire due to excessive lint in the exhaust filter. The fire destroyed the dryer and the surrounding plaster walls, tile floor, ceiling and decorative doors of the built-in closet. The condo was not a total loss, but the fire fighting efforts caused additional damage. The sliding glass doors were shattered, and Mr. Smith's imported antique carpets, as well as the padding and some of the subfloor were completely destroyed by water damage.

What would Mr. Smith's insurance policy pay? Do you know what the association's Master insurance policy covers?

If Mr. Smith is like many condominium owners, he will likely have coverage for his appliances and carpets, subject to a policy deductible on his contents policy. The association's insurance policy may pay for the patio doors and replacement of the subfloor as part of the condo building. All other damaged property in the condo unit is considered additions and alterations and Mr. Smith's responsibility. With Masterpiece Condominium Preference there is coverage for any portion of the unit that is Mr. Smith's responsibility under the Master Deed.

Loss Assessments

- ★ Loss assessments offer condominium associations the ability to spread out the uncovered costs resulting from a loss to common area property or a liability claim deriving from a common area.
- ★ With increasing costs for commercial property coverage, many associations have opted for higher master policy deductibles. This in turn has increased the likelihood of more frequent and severe loss assessments to unit owners, especially assessments resulting from master policy deductibles.
- ★ Unit Assessments coverage helps protect insureds when such assessments are the result of a loss that would be covered under their Condo and Co-op Preference policies.

The Pool Party

Mrs. Anderson lives in a beautiful, private condo development. She invited eight of her son's friends to a pool party and barbecue to be held at her development's pool, in celebration of his 10th birthday. One of the children was on the high dive when a supporting bolt came loose. The boy lost his balance and fell, hitting the side of the pool and breaking his leg. His parents sued the association for negligent maintenance of the diving board. The condominium association's master insurance policy covered the loss, less their deductible, which was $100,000. The homeowners were each assessed $5,000 to fill the gap in coverage caused by the association's policy deductible. Most of the unit owners had insurance that covered them up to $1,000 toward their association's insurance deductible. Mrs. Anderson is fortunate. She has a Masterpiece Condominium Preference policy and is fully covered up to $10,000.
